Development Plans, Programmes, and Projects

A major collection of official and semi-official documents published on microfiche

Introduction

A major problem facing professionals working in the field of rural development is the need to acquire information on past experiences of development projects as well as awareness of ongoing activities being planned and implemented.

Specialized documentation units have been established at several places, to act as channels of communication for the dissemination of information accumulated in development agencies and Western academic institutions together with the wealth of reported experiences in rural development that exist in the developing countries.

The microfiche collection

The microfiche collection is composed primarily of non-conventional or 'grey' literature; i.e., official and semi-official material, published or non-published reports issued by governmental agencies on the local and national levels, international and private voluntary organizations, and academic institutions. These documents, which constitute basic tools for development planners, rarely come under bibliographic control nor can they be readily acquired through conventional commercial channels.

The documents selected for inclusion in this project are drawn from holdings that cover the spectrum of the development process as it occurs in specific locations, i.e., from applications for financing, project appraisals, and plans, to work programmes and evaluations.

This collection will facilitate document delivery, which hitherto has been handicapped by the limited number of available copies.

Update

The microfiche collection will be updated regularly. The items will be selected from material collected by the cooperating libraries, and each update will cover material received by them during the preceding months.

A standing order will automatically bring you your choice of all new documents as they appear for the region, or countries thus keeping your collection uniquely up to date.

Rural and Regional Development

Development plans, Programmes, and Projects
A major collection of official and semi-official documents published on microfiche

Editor: Devoira Auerbach, Development Study Center, Rehovot, Israel

Supplement 5 to the 1st catalogue

The Rural and Regional Development microfiche edition forms an integral part of IDC Publishers' programme of Economics / Social Studies publications.

Professionals working in the field of rural and regional development often encounter problems when searching for up-to-date information or past experiences related to planning and development. Such information is usually scattered through a large number of repositories - or not available at all.

In close cooperation with the Zentrum für Internationale Entwicklungs- und Umweltforschung* (University of Giessen, Germany) and the Development Study Center (Rehovot, Israel), IDC Publishers issues a respectable number of such documents on microfiche since 1989.

Titles selected for incorporation within this project primarily consist of official and semi-official documents: published or non-published reports by government agencies at the national or regional level, international and private volunteer organizations, various NGO's, academic institutions, and working groups from international agencies.

IDC intends to maintain this essential programme and is extremely pleased with the inclusion of a representative selection of documents from the Centre in Giessen. The Centre maintains one of the seminal collections in the field of research into social-economic development at environmentally sustainable levels. Further expansions will be developed with the Centre.

Study of the documents yields superior results if combined with additional data from IDC's analogous microfiche editions of:

- National Statistical Reports,
- National Development Plans
- Documents on Education Development

These programmes are regularly supplemented and cumulated. Subscription (or standing order) rates are available for this and other publications in the field of Economics / Social Studies, please contact IDC for information.
